Ben-Gurion Scores U. S. For Conduct In U. N. Council Censure Of Israel Over Raid Into Syria That Also Deplored Hostile Exchanges, Reaffirmed 1956 Condemnation Of Reprisals, Warned On Future

Premier David Ben-Gurion assailed the United States Government for conduct in the United Nations Security Council that he said was designed "to meet the taste of the Egyptian Government." The Premier addressed the Knesset, or Parliament, at the beginning of debate on the Security Council's censure of Israel.

The Knesset, after a three-hour debate, voted 76 to 8 to approve a resolution backing the Premier's stand. It had been moved by ten parties in the Knesset, including the two Arab parties, says the New York Times. The Communists, who were not among the backers of the resolution, cast the three dissenting votes.

Mr. Ben-Gurion, in his speech, criticized Britain and the Soviet Union and the rest of the Security Council, except France, which abstained from the voting.

He charged that Maj. Gen. Carl Carlsson von Horn, chief of the United Nations Truce Supervisory Organization, had given the Security Council a one-sided picture of the Israeli attack and the events that led to it.

General von Horn, the Premier said, did not "see fit to report a single case in which the Syrians opened fire on Israel — whether it was firing and shelling at Israeli settlements or shots fired at Israeli fishermen and police patrol boats."

He suggested that Syria never had to fear censure by the Security Council because she could rely on a veto by the Soviet Union.

"The United States Government," the Premier said, "which is not in the habit of using its right to veto, decided this time to draft a resolution censuring Israel that should meet with the support of Egypt — who is now a member of the Security Council — and she therefore amended her original draft to meet the taste of the Egyptian Government."

The Premier said he regarded the resolution "as being based on a double standard."

Premier Ben-Gurion also criticized Adlai E. Stevenson, the United States delegate at the United Nations, who made mention of provocation in his speech before Security Council on March 28.

"He did not feel obliged to designate the Syrian attacks with machine-guns and recoilless guns on Israeli patrol boats on the Sea of Galilee, which is in Israeli sovereign territory, as a violation of the armistice agreement," the Premier said, reports the New York Times. "He was content to refer to them as anonymous provocation."

The resolution adopted after the debate said the Knesset "categorically rejects" the Security Council Resolution and "declares that Israel's right to self-defense is an unchallengeable sovereign right which is assured to every people by the charter of the United Nations."

"Israel is loyal to the principles of the United Nations," the resolution went on, "and she will carry out all the obligations involved toward every state on a basis of reciprocity. She will not submit to aggression."

The Security Council reaffirmed by a vote of 10 to 0 a 1956 resolution that condemned reprisal raids by Israel or Syria. The Soviet Union, in a surprise move, voted for a joint United States-British resolution condemning such raids, says the New York Times. Only France of the eleven members, abstained.

The resolution implied a rebuke to both sides in the recent Israeli-Syrian shootings on the eastern shore of the Sea of Galilee, also known as Lake Tiberias. It said the Security Council vote "deplores the hostile exchanges between the Syrian Arab Republic and Israel starting on March 8," and called on both sides to keep peace henceforth.

It also endorsed recommendations by the truce supervisor, Maj. Gen. Carl Carlsson von Horn, to strengthen the peace-keeping machinery. This would include a United Nations patrol boat on the Sea of Galilee, more freedom for truce observers on both sides of the armistice line, and renewed meetings of the Israeli-Syrian Mixed Armistice Commission.

Michael Comay, of Israel, had already presented his country's strong objections to all these steps. An earlier resolution by Syria, accusing Israel of "a wanton attack" on March 16, was withdrawn before the voting on the United States-British resolution. Mohamed Arab el-Zayyat, of the United Arab Republic, who had proposed a vote on the Syrian resolution, announced the withdrawal with Syria's consent.

Mr. el-Zayyat said that although his delegation objected to rebukes implied in the United States-British document, the United Arab Republic would vote for it because it reaffirmed the 1956 condemnation of Israel.

An Israeli resolution condemning Syria for the recent series of clashes was simply dropped. It had not been proposed, as required, by a member of the Council. Israel is not a member of the Council, nor is Syria.

The joint resolution was worked out when it was considered clear that either of the others would be vetoed. United States sources appeared distressed that the vote was described as a renewed condemnation, says the New York Times. They said it was only a "reaffirmation" of past actions.

The Soviet delegate Platon D. Morozov, took the opposite view. He said the resolution should not have dealt with Syria as well as Israel, but since the key paragraphs "condemn the Israeli against Syria," his delegation would support it. This startled delegates and observers, most of whom had believed that Russia would abstain, as France did, as a token of disapproval.

Armand Bérard, of France, also took the view that the document represented a condemnation of Israel. He said his delegation believed the responsibility for the attack of March 16 lay on both sides, in view of Syrian provocation. He said the French would not support a resolution they did not believe was just.

Two paragraphs led Syria to accept the text, and thus won over the United Arab Republic and the Soviet Union.

The first said the Security Council "reaffirms the Security Council resolution of 19 January 1956, which condemned Israeli military action in breach of the general armistice agreement, whether or not undertaken by way of retaliation."

The second said the Council "determines that the Israeli attack of 16-17 March, 1962, constitutes a flagrant violation of that resolution and calls upon Israel scrupulously to refrain from such action in the future."

The United Arab Republic tried to have these paragraphs presented separately. Sir Patrick Dean, of Great Britain, said that, as provided by the Council's rules, the United States and Britain had objected to any section of the resolution. Mr. el-Zayyat then said the United Arab Republic would support the resolution as it stood.

Mr. Morozov said his delegation would vote for the resolution as a whole while retaining its adverse views on parts of it. He had said the text "put the victim on an equal footing with the aggressor."

Mr. Morozov said that resolution should be "a serious warning" to Israel.

The resolution of January 19, 1956, said the Council, "condemns" an Israeli attack of December 11, 1956 as "a flagrant violation" both of the armistice agreement and the United Nations Charter, says the New York Times. It said that in case of future violations "the Council will have to consider what further measures under the Charter are required."

In his final speech before the vote, Mr. Comay vigorously denied that Israel had a policy of "retaliatory raids." He has said the attack of March 16 was necessary to destroy a Syrian fortified post from which Israeli fisherman and police boats had been harassed.

General von Horn reported that his observers had been unable to find any such fortified post "existing or destroyed."

The following is the text of the United States-British resolution on the Palestine question adopted by the Security Council:

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolutions of 15 July, 1948, and 18 May, 1951,

Having considered the report of the Chief of Staff of the United Nations Truce Supervisory Organization on the military activities in the Lake Tiberias area and in the demilitarized zone,

Having heard the statements of the representatives of the Syrian Arab Republic and Israel,

Being deeply concerned over developments in the area which have taken place in violation of the Charter and of the armistice agreement,

Recalling in particular the provisions of Article 2, Paragraph 4 of the Charter, and Article 1 of the Syrian-Israeli general armistice agreement,

Noting with satisfaction that a cease-fire has been achieved,

1. Deplores the hostile exchanges between the Syrian Arab Republic and Israel starting on 8 March, 1962, and calls upon the two governments concerned to comply with their obligations under Article 2, Paragraph 4 of the Charter by refraining from the threat as well as the use of force;

2. Reaffirms the Security Council resolution of 19 January, 1956, which condemned Israeli military action in breach of the general armistice agreement, whether or not undertaken by way of retaliation;

3. Determines that the Israeli attack of 16-17 March, 1962, constitutes a flagrant violation of that resolution and calls upon Israel scrupulously to refrain from such action in the future;

4. Endorses the measures recommended by the Chief of Staff for the strengthening of the truce supervisory organization in its tasks of maintaining and restoring the peace and of protecting and deterring future incidents, and calls upon the Israeli and Syrian authorities to assist the Chief of Staff in their early implementation;

5. Calls upon both parties to abide scrupulously by the cease-fire arranged by the Chief of Staff on 17 March, 1962;

6. Calls for strict observance of Article 5 of the general armistice agreement, which provides for the exclusion of armed forces from the demilitarized zone, and Annex 4 of that agreement, which sets limits on forces in the defensive area, and calls upon the governments of Israel and the Syrian Arab Republic to cooperate with the Chief of Staff in eliminating any violations thereof;

7. Calls upon the governments of Israel and of the Syrian Arab Republic to cooperate with the Chief of Staff and the Truce Supervisory Organization in carrying out his responsibilities under the general armistice agreement and the pertinent resolutions of the Security Council and urges that all steps necessary for reactivating the mixed armistice commission and for making full use of the mixed armistice machinery be promptly taken;

8. Requests the Chief of Staff of the Truce Supervisory Organization to report as appropriate concerning the situation.

Growth Of U. S. Hate Groups Was Forecast By A.J. Committee Last Year

A small number of hate-mongers are stepping up "blatantly bigoted activity" against Jews in the United States, the American Jewish Committee charged as early as June 1961. The Committee reported that although anti-Semitism generally was ebbing in the U.S., recent "aggressive tactics" had "registered notable inroads upon the public consciousness."

Among the trends it noted were bombings and desecrations of synagogues, beginning in 1958, the revival of Nazi slogans and techniques, and a resurgent Ku Klux Klan, says the New York Times. The Committee, in a twenty-eight page report, urged a program to fight intolerance by the following measures:

A news "quarantine" on publicity-seeking hate groups.

Exposure of clandestine supporters who give money to racists.

Handing evidence to authorities when bigots break laws.

Repudiation by institutions that false patriots profess to protect, such as churches.

The report, called "Bigotry in Action," includes accounts of racist agitation in the South after the Supreme Court desegregation decisions of 1954 and 1955; political hate-mongers; Arab and neo-Nazi propaganda; synagogue desecrations; and a case history of George Lincoln Rockwell, the "fuehrer" of the American Nazi party.

After the Supreme Court decisions, a "new and vicious brand of carpetbagger" descended on the South, the report said. It named Frederick John Kasper, of Camden, N. J., as the "most notorious agitator" and a rabid anti-Semite. It said: "His 'Ballad of John Kasper' ('No Jew Supreme Court Justice gonna make my laws for me') was sung loudly at anti-Negro rallies in many Southern communities." The booklet charged Kasper with whipping up anti-integration disorders in Clinton and Nashville, Tenn., and told of his subsequent jailing.

Among the "purveyors of anti-Semitic prose" to Southerners, the report named Conde McGinley's Christian Educational Association, with headquarters in New Jersey, and Gerald L. K. Smith.

Among the bigots in politics, according to the booklet, is the National States Rights Party, formed in 1958. A charter member of the party's unit in Atlanta, Georgia, George Michael Bright, was indicted but not convicted in the 1958 bombing of the Temple there.

"Official Arab propaganda confines itself largely to insinuations of 'dual loyalty' on the part of American Jews," the report declared. "The terms 'Zionist' and 'Jew' are used interchangeably in derogatory context."

A five-page biography of George Lincoln Rockwell described him as gaining public attention, says the New York Times, by such "shock methods" as wearing Nazi uniforms, promising in pamphlets that "Jew traitors" will be delivered to the gas chambers, and incitement to riot with inflammatory speeches.

Drobnin Jews, Cremated By Nazis, Laid To Rest On Staten Island

The Jewish community of Drobnin, an obscure Polish village, was finally laid to rest in a hillside cemetery on Staten Island. The community died in the wartime crematoria at Auschwitz, writes Charles Portis, in the New York Herald Tribune. The burial was symbolic — there was only a small container of ashes and bones within the simple pine coffin . . . but the 200 persons gathered at the grave were told:

"You who had relatives at Drobnin must believe that the bones and ashes here are the remains of your loved ones. It is here, at this grave and this monument, that you must come to pray."

The speaker was one of fifty survivors of the 1,800 Drobniner Jews who were herded into a cattle train in November, 1942, and taken to the Auschwitz concentration camp by the Nazis.

Rabbi Abraham David Feffer, an instructor at Jewish Teachers' Seminary in New York, brought the ashes back from Auschwitz, which he visited several months ago.

A Drobniner himself, he delivered a eulogy for his townspeople in a traditional Jewish funeral service at Riverside Memorial Chapel, Amsterdam Avenue, at 76th Street, New York. Over the coffin, draped with the blue and white flag of Israel, he said:

"Although we are honoring you today by putting up a monument of stone . . . nevertheless, we are aware that not in stone will you be remembered. Not on monuments will your deeds be described, but in the innermost sanctities of our souls and on the tablets of our hearts will we remember your greatness. . . . Woe to the eyes which behold this scene; woe to the tongue that has to utter eulogies . . . a Jewish world, a holy world, which is gone with the smoke."

Rabbi Feffer, now thirty-three, was fourteen when he entered Auschwitz. His mother and father died there. After the service at Riverside, the mourners went in cars to the United Hebrew Cemetery, in Richmond Town, Staten Island, where the coffin was lowered at the base of a thirteen foot monument.

The names of 175 families are on the monument, along with the inscription: "In loving memory of the Drobniner martyrs who perished by the brutal hands of Nazism and their collaborators through the war years, 1939-1945."

The expense of the funeral service was met by the Riverside Chapel and the monument was put up by the Independent Drobniner Benevolent Society. The society was formed in 1907 by Drobniners who had made good in America as a welfare organization for relatives in Drobnin. Since there is no longer a Jewish community in Drobnin, the group is now largely a memorial society.

In 1942 the population of Drobnin was 2,500, of whom 1,800 were Jews, Rabbi Feffer said, reports the New York Herald Tribune. Of the fifty who lived through Auschwitz, thirty are in the United States and most of the others are in Israel, he said.

N.Y. Boy, 16, Gets Perfect Score In National Math. Test

A 16-year-old senior at Forest Hills High School in Queens, N.Y., scored a perfect 150 on the Mathematics Association of America examination. Michael Razor's perfect score was the fourth in the thirteen-year history of the contest. He described his achievement as "one of the happiest things that ever happened to me."

But he added quickly that the test was "just problem solving," and that his real interest was in mathematical theory, says the New York Times. For completing the test without an error, Michael will receive a gold medal from the M.A.A. and the Society of Actuaries, sponsors of the contest. About 175,000 students in high schools across the nation took part. The official results will not be announced until early May.

As his class standing would indicate — eighth among 1,328 students at the end of his junior year — Michael is at home in other courses as well as in mathematics.

He is president of the school's Science Honor Society; co-leader of the honor society, Arista, and a charter member of the newly formed Alpha Society for students who have brought outstanding honors to the school.

He also coaches the school's mathematics team, which has won the city-wide mathematics contest for the last two semesters.

As a child Michael was fascinated by numbers. At the age of four he used to count himself to sleep. His mother would write down the number he had reached each night in his self-appointed task of reaching a trillion.

In junior and senior high school, Michael soon exhausted the offerings in mathematics, studied on his own, and passed the Regents with scores ranging from 96 to 100. He has taken courses in advanced geometry and intermediate calculus at Brooklyn College, says the New York Times. He also has participated in the Rockefeller Institute summer program for high school students in the biological sciences.

Michael lives with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Razar, and a 13-year-old brother, David, at 73-37 Austin Street, Forest Hills. His father is president of the Armor Thread Corporation, and his mother teaches fourth grade.

Seminary In N. Y. Showed Great Microfilm Exhibit

The library of The Jewish Theological Seminary of America presented a special exhibit to mark the recent acquisition of the David Kaufmann microfilm collection, and also the 85th anniversary of The Jewish Theological Seminary of Budapest, Hungary, on whose faculty Dr. Kaufmann served. In announcing the dual celebration, Dr. Simon Greenberg, vice-chancellor of the New York Seminary, stated that "The new acquisition has established our collection of manuscripts and microfilms as the most complete in the world and therefore an incomparable resource for scholars doing original research in an area of Judaica and Hebraica". The exhibit consisted of publication, holograph letters, and manuscript facsimiles written by scholars of the Budapest Seminary.

Professor David Kaufmann, Jewish scholar and faculty member at the Budapest academy from 1877 until his death in 1899, had amassed a large and precious library containing some of the finest specimens of Jewish calligraphic and illuminated art. The 170,000 pages of printed material have been compressed into 5660 meters of film, now incorporated in the New York Seminary's Louis Ginzberg Microfilm Library. The Kaufmann collection includes 594 manuscripts; 1066 Hebrew prints, most of them rare; 575 Judaica items; 29 Spanish Jewish works; 47 bibliographies; 258 periodicals; and illustrated manuscripts including the famed Kaufmann Haggadah (the order of the Passover service), and Mishna, the first codification of rabbinic law made by Judah ha-Nasi, who lived in the second half of the third century; and the 1295 copy of Maimonides Mishna Torah, his code of Jewish law.

Prior to World War II, the Kaufmann collection fell into the possession of the Hungarian Academy of Science. During the German occupation of Hungary this legacy was carried off by the Nazis but was returned intact following liberation. Intense and continued interest by scholars throughout the world to view the films prompted the Hungarian government to offer them to several libraries. Although the Kaufmann manuscripts have long been available to the Western world, their accessibility since World War II has been limited.

The importance of the collection for serious students of Judaica lies in its rare codices, marginal notes, and comments contributed by Kaufmann's erudite predecessors, among them Abraham Graziano, of Modena, 17th century Hebrew author and poet. In addition, the filmed collection will enable scholars to study the unedited portions of the works.

The Library of The Jewish Theological Seminary houses the largest collection of Hebraica and Judaica in the world. It is open to qualified scholars for study and references purposes Monday through Thursday from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m.; Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The public is welcome to visit at these hours.

Westminster Bridge and the Houses of Parliament in London—one of 38 cities in Europe served by KLM.

Why so many experienced air travelers believe that the careful, punctual Dutch have made KLM the most reliable way to fly to any of 38 European Cities

KLM flies an average of 133,000 miles every day. The equivalent of five times around the world. Or about halfway to the moon. Read 26 other remarkable facts about KLM Royal Dutch Airlines, and how they earned their enviable reputation for reliability.

1. A passenger returning from Hong Kong was so impressed by KLM reliability that he wrote: "One of the first things I did was to buy 20 shares of KLM stock.

2. KLM has had more years of experience than any other airline. Founded in 1919, KLM is literally the world's first airline.

3. KLM is pre-eminent in jet maintenance. KLM ground crews were servicing NATO jets years before the first jetliners went into trans-Atlantic service.

4. KLM uses ultrasonic washing machines to clean engine parts, ultraviolet light to inspect them, infrared ovens to dry them. But to clean cylinders and pistons, KLM craftsmen use crushed cherry-stones—which can be blasted against the parts at tremendous pressure without scratching.

5. To be a KLM jetliner captain, a pilot must have flown twelve years with KLM.

6. Two hundred and sixty-six KLM pilots have flown more than 10,000 flying hours each—a total of more than two million hours.

7. A KLM jetliner captain goes back to school every four months for refresher courses. They keep him up-to-date with new KLM developments.

Seven navigation systems

8. Every KLM DC-8 jetliner flying between Canada and Europe has three pilots, two flight engineers and seven systems of navigation.

9. KLM was the first airline in the world to use metal propellers, air-cooled engines and aircraft powered with turbo-compound engines.

10. KLM is one of the world's largest carriers of commercial air freight. Recent cargoes flown by KLM included priceless van Gogh paintings, insecticide urgently needed to fight a plague of caterpillars in Egypt, and 8 tons of gold valued at more than eleven million dollars.

11. KLM is the leading air cargo carrier for Canadian exports to the Common Market countries.

12. The cabin of a KLM-DC-8 jetliner is 12 feet wide. It takes 6 seats abreast comfortably. KLM's first class cabin seats only four abreast. A luxury.

13. Each cabin attendant on a KLM jetliner flight to Europe speaks four languages fluently. Collectively, they may speak as many as eight.

14. The official language of KLM is not Dutch but English. It is spoken in KLM's 54 offices in Europe.

15. The initials KLM stand for Koninklijke Luchtvaart Maatschappij. In English, KLM is called Royal Dutch Airlines.

16. Every French wine served by KLM is chateau-bottled. In economy class, you can buy a quarter-bottle for a trifling 28 cents

17. On very long trips, such as Montreal to Pakistan, KLM takes particular care that you are never served the same meal twice. This means careful planning. The first draft of every new schedule is sent to KLM's catering department about eight months before the flight takes off. The chefs then plan menus for the entire route. This is the sort of Dutch thoroughness one passenger had in mind when he wrote: "Every detail from the smallest to the greatest was executed with such precision and courtesy."

18. On a flight from New York, you will be served meals prepared by KLM's chef, Mr. C. J. Stekelenburg. From Amsterdam, by Mr. G. J. Krielaart. They were the first airline chefs ever admitted to the Confrérie de la Chaîne des Rotisseurs, a French culinary society founded in 1246.

19. KLM prepares special baby food on request. Tell your Travel Agent your baby's diet when you book your seat.

20. Amsterdam has the only airport in the world where you can buy a car tax-free and drive off within an hour. You have 16 models to choose from—all at considerable savings.

KLM in Canada

21. KLM's stopover plan offers you some real bargains. Example: If you're flying to Rome you can actually go via the Caribbean for only $32.60 more than the round trip economy jet fare from Toronto. You can also visit Portugal, Spain, France, Belgium, Holland and Britain on the same ticket. Your Travel Agent can give you all the details.

22. KLM has daily flights out of Montreal and New York for Europe. During the peak Summer season, you can choose from nine weekly flights from Montreal and four daily flights from New York.

23. KLM has been established in Canada since 1946 and now has offices in 12 principal Canadian cities.

24. Not all airlines offer you a choice of jet and propeller flights. KLM does. The advantage of a propeller flight is that it costs less. The 17-day economy class excursion fare from Montreal to Paris is only $338.60 round trip. This includes London, Brussels and Amsterdam at no extra fare.

25. KLM offers additional savings for group travel. If you are a member of a qualified group, you would pay only $283 for a propeller flight economy class return ticket from Montreal to Paris and you could still include London, Brussels and Amsterdam at no extra fare.

26. Having themselves been professionals in the field of air transportation for 43 years, KLM recognize that it takes professionals to plan trips efficiently. In every city in Canada, KLM is represented by a professional—your Travel Agent.

The Passover Mistake Cake

(The following story of a Passover in Israel when food shortages produced real challenges to the ingenuity of the Israel housewife was written by Mrs. Dvorah Rabinowitz, past national president of the Mizrachi Women's Organization of America. Mrs. Rabinowitz, who knows both American and Israeli life, is in Israel, as chairman of the Israel executive of the Mizrachi Women's Organization of America.)

It was Erev Pesach and although the housewives of Israel had been promised an additional egg ration, we took no chances and stored our rations prior to Pesach, so that we could prepare some of the delicacies that are symbolic of the festival. Of course, it was out of the question to even dream of making a sponge cake or a nut cake. However, undaunted Israeli housewives planned, discussed, and concocted new recipes. Having a thoughtful and loving family and friends who gave us food certificates, we planned "sumptuous" menus out of the supplies at the food stores, and invited as our Seder and Pesach guests those friends who did not have such American connections.

But what to do about eggs? I had plenty of egg powder and while I was fairly successful in its use for "chometzdige" cakes, what could I do with egg powder when there was no flour, baking powder, and so on, at Pesach time? So I looked up my special Pesach cookbook and quickly passed over those recipes calling for six, eight, ten or (echoes of the past) twelve eggs. As I was about to admit defeat, I found a recipe that not only called for ingredients which were available in Israel at that time, but, miracle of miracles, this cake required only three eggs.

Joyous at heart, I announced to my family that this Pesach we would even have a wonderful cake. And so it was I made the cake and it was the piece de resistance for I had trimmed it with freshly stewed strawberries. The cake was sparingly portioned out to family and friends and eaten with relish. I behaved as though I had achieved a major victory.

Chol Ha-Moed Pesach came around and my daughter asked whether we could spare three eggs for another cake. Some of her friends were coming into Tel Aviv from the kibbutz and it would be a special treat for them. Is there a sacrifice too great for these idealistic American Bnai Brak boys and girls who come to Israel as religious pioneers? What are three eggs in ration time for such young people? Of course we decided to bake the cake.

Rena took the cookbook but could not find the recipe. "Darling," I said, "look under the ingredients, three eggs." Finally I took the book; I knew where the recipe was. "Here it is!" I pointed. When Rena looked at the recipe, she exclaimed, "Mother, you're not wearing your glasses. This recipe calls for eight eggs."

We had a good laugh over my "mistake cake" and immediately proceeded to make it again with three eggs. The recipe became known as "The Mistake Cake" and was used by my many neighbors and friends. Perhaps this very Pesach they are enjoying the successful mistake.

J.D.C. Sends Emergency Passover Supplies To Jews In France

The Joint Distribution Committee shipped an additional 30,000 pounds of matzoh to France to enable newly-arrived Jewish migrants and refugees to observe the Passover, it was announced by Edward M. M. Warburg, JDC chairman, in New York. This brings the total of Passover shipments to France to more than 101,000 pounds, most of it sent earlier this year. In all, JDC distributed nearly 220,000 pounds of special foods to needy Jews throughout the world for the observance of Passover. Funds for this and other JDC relief and rehabilitation programs are provided mainly by the campaigns of the United Jewish Appeal.

The emergency shipment to France was in addition to 71,023 pounds of matzoh ordered by the JDC office for France last December and shipped to the country some time ago. Mr. Warburg said: "There has been an influx of newcomers into France recently from many countries of Europe and North Africa, unsurpassed since the period immediately after the war. The extra shipment for Passover underscores the fact that many of these new arrivals are in desperate need of help, not only for provisions for the holiday season, but for the basic necessities of life during the difficult days ahead."

In addition to matzoh, supplies included matzoh meal, kosher fat, and wine. Jewish communities to which shipments of Passover foods have been made include those of Albania, Austria, Belgium, Greece, Italy, Portugal, Spain, and Yugoslavia, and Latin-American countries.

In addition to the food shipments, Passover assistance had been provided by JDC to Jews in a number of other areas. In Poland, matzoh is baked and sold by the Kehillah, the official Jewish religious body, with equipment provided originally by JDC, which also pays for distribution to those Jews who cannot afford to pay. Jews receiving help from JDC in Israel and the Moslem countries of North Africa and the Near East are given special cash grants to enable them to purchase locally the extra supplies needed for observance of Passover.

ABOUT THE PRESERVATION OF A HUMAN COMMUNITY

ices. A beautiful new administrative and public building was erected on the cemetery grounds, and in August the agency took over full operating responsibility for 48 cemetery groups. We appreciate the interest and support of the Federation in resolving many problems, and we now foresee an efficient operation of dignified facilities.

Free final resting places were provided for 41 adults and children. We appreciate the Provincial Government's understanding of our religious service for unattached men and women of the Jewish community. We mourn the untimely loss of Manuel Mendell, Q.C., whose personal service will be sorely missed.

Our legal aid committee has been reappraising these services. In view of our community's growth, we believe that legal aid has a special contribution to make toward the maintenance of sounder family living. During the year a variety of problems were dealt with in and out of Courts. 109 Elderly Persons benefitted from the Governmental tribunals held to determine their eligibility for pensions.

One measure of our agency's effectiveness can be seen in our financial statement elsewhere in this report. At the same time, can any price be put on the happiness of adopting couples who have been helped to become real parents through us?

How does one fully cost-price the value of former refugees who now have responsible positions in commerce, in professions, and in the general life of society? Can we put a price tag on the families which now are able to get along without friction, because of our counselling services? Can we say what it costs to help a 75-year-old man regain a feeling of belonging to life, rather than feeling lost, because we care about him?

Helping individuals one by one, family by family, both in direct casework and family-life group discussions, is our contribution towards the preservation of a human community. In a world which many forces are trying to destroy, it is good to know that there are countless groups like ours everywhere striving for the future.

To do all this work has meant a deep commitment on the part of our professional, clerical, homemaker, and foster parents staff. Our consultants in the medical and psychological sciences have aided us, as have sister groups in and outside of of the Federation. Municipal, Provincial, and Federal personnel have also been most helpful. During the year the agency cooperated in the training of eight graduate students from the McGill School of Social Work. We hope to enlarge this program of training.

I would be remiss if I did not acknowledge that all our work has only been as effective as these chains of inter-relationships, strengthened and kept alive by the enthusiasm and willingness of many people to contribute their minds and energies to the common task of providing service to human beings by other trained human beings on behalf of the community we represent. For those whose lives we have helped to become more meaningful and satisfying, I extend to all our heart-felt appreciation.

I trust our community realizes that we are pledged to a service of tremendous importance not only to ourselves, but to the world which our children will inhabit. In 1963 we shall observe our Centennial Year and recount then the rich heritage of this tradition we keep alive. As president, my duties have been eased by the over-ready support received from my colleagues on the board, officers and staff. I sincerely thank each of them and our senior staff: Lottie Lotheim; Louis Kursner, Q.C.; Ernest Hirschbach, and Peter Melvyn. To David Weiss, executive director, whose leadership makes our work a living reality, special appreciation is acknowledged.

About The Preservation Of A Human Community

Annual report of Baron De Hirsch Institute and Jewish Child Welfare Bureau, of Montreal, by the president, Joseph Caplan

1961 completed our 98th year of service. This agency is an enterprise whose aim is the preservation of a human community. 1961 will be remembered as a year of severe challenges to all mankind. On one hand, man-made technology has opened up space travel; on the other, man can press the trigger to annihilate the whole world. Can we survive this dreadful predicament? Only if all of us strive for the realization of the human community, can the outcome be in favour of man.

And never before in history have so many people come face to face with the dilemmas of survival: There is no underground shelter to protect anyone except in the person-to-person, nation-to-nation, sanctuary of understanding. Many organizations share in the tasks of helping people to help themselves. We must recognize that people are more than statistics or finances. To help people to help themselves requires every known skill, every art of understanding. In 1961, we concentrated on giving services to help individuals and families, regardless of their situations, to improve or enhance their personal and social functioning.

The predicaments our clients face are those we also face. Each of us lives in an interdependent world; our existence depends on vital responses with families, friends, and colleagues. Yet the pressures and stresses of modern living create crises at every age and stage of human experience. The problems of unemployment, financial management, aging, illness, emotional and family breakdown, impair our abilities or capacities to function, and agency services are required for solution.

Last year we made progress in extending all services on the basis of skilled counselling provided by trained and experienced staff through whom troubled persons can learn to handle their situations better. We were able to do this because of public assistance changes foreseen last year.

Now that Jewish families and individuals are entitled to direct public assistance and social allowances from Municipal and Provincial Departments of Welfare, we are integrating our family counselling and welfare services into one unified department for more effective use of our funds and staff resources. To facilitate this new approach, we have been fortunate in developing an unusual joint programme of psychiatric consultation and training for staff with the Psychiatric Department of the Jewish General Hospital.

The agency now has a senior J.G.H. psychiatrist in residence to assist in our diagnosis and treatment of problems which increasingly reflect mental health difficulties as well as adjustment disturbances in our clients. This development has already been recognized as a most progressive step. Here lies the key to real prevention in our future work.

In 1961 we received 772 new requests for various family services. A 25% increase in counselling for personal and family adjustment occurred. An average of 290 families, consisting of 1160 persons, received counselling service. 7340 treatment interviews and consultations were required. Our financial maintenance caseload dropped by 75%. We, however, continue to follow up special social allowance cases which require intervention for protective and supportive purposes. We offer financial assistance in fatherless families, for aged persons and others where rehabilitation possibilities and changes can be achieved with our help.

In serving Elderly Jewish Persons, our agency carried a special role related to community programmes. While our primary goal is to assist Elderly Persons and their grown children in resolving a variety of problems, ranging from family alienation to housing, we realize that broad communal planning is still needed to enlarge resources for the well-being of the Aged, so that added meaning may accrue to the added years which medical science affords. 687 Elderly Persons were helped with old age pensions and another 257 were counselled in 1961.

243 families received attention by our visiting homemaker service and housekeeping care program which helped to prevent family break-up. Of these, 112 families with 313 children were kept intact despite the variety of illnesses affecting the mother, such as post-confinement, surgical recovery, medical and psychiatric convalescence.

The other 131 family units, with 458 children, were supplemented with money in order to provide long-term domestic help, despite similar physical, medical, and emotional difficulties. There is a strong preventive connection between these resources which we foresee expanding and the small number of children in foster care, since we keep families from breaking up by the provision of such family-oriented service.

Children continue to be cared for in the larger context of family and community. It is a pleasure to report that the Provincial Government contributed to the establishment of our first group foster home residence for boys which opened last year, and which gave 15 the kind of care that helped them enormously.

An abandoned boy of eleven, Michael was slow in learning and getting along. He changed so much as a result of this group care that we are happy to report that he has been accepted as an adoptable child. Truly, it can be said that to save one child is almost like saving the world! This program has more than justified our original expectations, and early next year we shall open a group residence for girls.

The community must acknowledge the tremendous contribution which foster parents make to this vital task of helping neglected and abandoned children to grow up as useful members of society. Foster families gave 19,997 days or 58 years of care to 55 children in placement in 1961.

We must report, however, that there is still great need for Jewish families to offer their homes and hearts to children. At the same time we realize that in these days children have such complex problems that many of them require specialized resources. We foresee the growth of more placement facilities such as group foster care and subsidized foster homes.

During the year 21 unmarried mothers required special help, and 11 children were relinquished to the agency for adoptive placement. 35 evaluations were completed for Social Welfare Court adoptions. 27 children with physical and mental handicaps were placed in custodial institutions under our supervision. 56 youngsters were helped to remain at home after intensive counselling.

Moreover, our positive liaison with the Boys' Farm and Girls' Cottage School and the Social Welfare Court have led to marked improvement in the planning for boys and girls who come to these agencies, so that we continue our interest in their care and resettlement in the community. In the past few years this liaison has avoided the unnecessary use of these training schools.

During the year the modernization and integration of our cemetery operations were advanced. Words can hardly express our tremendous debt to Abe Nissenson, chairman of this department, for the splendid leadership he has given to this aspect of agency serv-

In The Prologue Of High Drama, Joseph Leopold Block, Of Inland Steel

It was no surprise to the associates of Joseph Leopold Block when he made the decision not to follow Big Steel in raising prices. The pipe-smoking, soft-spoken chairman and chief executive officer of Inland Steel Company, eighth largest producer, is not exactly a maverick among steel executives, says the New York Times. But neither is he a "me too" man. For one thing, Mr. Block is not so wary of Government interest in business as are many of his colleagues in management. He expressed his philosophy last November 7 in a talk to a management group:

"We hear some of our colleagues repeatedly assert that Government, in a free society, has no place whatsoever in economic affairs. But such a viewpoint is contrary to historic fact and totally unrealistic.

"From the early days of the Republic, and with increasing intensity, Government has played an important part in the economy. And today such matters of national and international urgency as the integrity of the dollar, the balance of payments, competition with other nations—including the Communist countries—and the cold war itself make it imperative for Government to participate in these vital problems."

When Mr. Block talked of "historic fact," he knew whereof he spoke. He has been a student of American history, especially economic history, for years. The library of his apartment on Chicago's Gold Coast was rebuilt and enlarged several years ago to provide proper setting for his valuable collection of Lincolniana. On his walls hang framed letters of every President.

And Mr. Block is not unfamiliar with Government. He served three years in Washington during World War II as a hard-working member of the War Production Board. The three $1 checks he received then as a dollar-a-year man have been framed, in his office in Inland Steel's nineteen-story office building at 30 West Monroe Street.

Since his student days at Cornell University in the Nineteen Twenties Mr. Block has often done the unexpected. He was elected an editor of the student newspaper at Cornell while a sophomore, an unusual distinction, and he left school the same year to begin training at Inland Steel's Indiana Harbor mill.

Inland has been founded in 1893 by a group headed by his grandfather, Joseph D. Block, and there had never been any question that he would be a steel man, says the New York Times. He held most posts in the company, from millhand up, until his election to the chairmanship in 1953.

Mr. Block's early bath in printer's ink left a stain on his fingers that has never worn off. He writes many articles for his company's publications and all his own speeches.

The year that he was named chairman of Inland, he wrote a short creed called "Nine Goals for Inland." High on the list was a desire that all Inland employees take an active interest in civic affairs. The last of the nine goals was to make a profit as good as or better than any competitor.

Mr. Block has lived up to his creed. He is president of the Chicago Community Fund; a vice president of the Chicago Chamber of Commerce; and has been active for years in Jewish charitable work.

Inland's chairman knows how to delegate authority, associates say, "but he's the one who speaks with authority here." Thus, although the formal announcement that Inland would not increase prices came from Philip D. Block Jr., his cousin, vice chairman of Inland, there was no doubt in New York that Joseph Block, now vacationing in the Far East, had made the actual decision.

Mr. Block was born in Chicago, October 6, 1902, and, except for his Cornell days and the war years in Washington, he has never lived anywhere else. His apartment at 1325 North Astor Street is comfortable but not pretentious. He and a group of four or five friends frequently walk to work in the morning. For him, it is a long two miles.

He was married in 1924 to Lucille B. Eichengreen, also of Chicago. She is with him on the vacation in the Far East, says the New York Times. The Blocks have a daughter, Mrs. Susan Rubnitz of suburban Winnetka, and four grandchildren, on whom Mr. Block dotes. Their son, Joseph L. Block Jr., died.

Knesset Decision With Regard To The U. N. Resolution On Raids

The following decision was adopted unanimously (except for the Communists) by the Knesset on April 10, 1962.

a) The Knesset vehemently rejects the resolution of the Security Council which demonstrates partiality and complete disregard of the constant attacks against Israel carried out by the armed forces of Syria; and which entails a miscarriage of justice encouraging aggression and endangering peace.

b) Israel is surrounded by hostile states which are maintaining a continuous state of war against her. The Knesset asserts that Israel's right of self-defence is a sovereign and indisputable right which is guaranteed to each nation under the charter of the United Nations.

c) Israel remains loyal to the principles of the charter of the United Nations and will fulfill all the undertakings deriving thereof towards every nation on the basis of reciprocity. She will not put up with aggression.

d) Israel will under all circumstances actively maintain her sovereignty in all her territory and waters.
